

Europe's Olive Oil Exports Reach Record-Breaking Pace

New York, NY

According to the Director of Agriculture and Rural Development's short-term market outlook report last year, European Union olive oil export volumes reached a new record in the 2019/2020 crop year. As the report noted, from October 2019 to July 2020, exports grew significantly and were on pace to reach 820,000 tons of oil! This total was a significant jump from the previous total. For example, the 2018/2019 crop year exported 647,600 tons of oil.

So, what is the reason for the record-breaking increase? Well, simply put, export volumes increased in every single of the European Union's main olive oil destinations.

Looking forward to the 2020/2021 crop year, the report also predicts that olive oil production in the E.U. will reach 2.2 million tons! This quantity would be a 17% increase compared to the previous year. Overall, consumption from households has driven the further success of olive oil in the last year, and we can understand why! Extra virgin olive oil is a magnificent, high-quality product that can be found in kitchens around the world.
